DEAR FRIENDS:

Join us for DRI's 2012 Annual Meeting—"The 21st Century Lawyer"—October 24–28, 2012, at the New Orleans Marriott Hotel. Located in southeastern Louisiana on the banks of the mighty Mississippi River, New Orleans is a city full of history, culture, mystery, and sensuality. It is called the "Queen of the Mississippi River" and "the Paris of the Americas," and is known for its Old World charm and "joie de vivre." Its music is sweet, its food divine, and its atmosphere is enchanting. Don't miss this opportunity to experience a city full of life, attend stellar education programs, and visit with friends and colleagues, new and old.

We begin our meeting on Thursday with a point/counterpoint discussion of the political landscape by Ambassador Karen Hughes and Dee Dee Myers, both having worked for President George W. Bush and President Bill Clinton, respectively. This timely debate, just two weeks before the presidential election, will be informative. Our Awards Luncheon speaker, Roy Blount, Jr., is a Southern humorist, author, and a familiar voice on National Public Radio's Wait Wait, Don't Tell Me. His presentation is sure to be entertaining. Friday's keynote speaker is internationally acclaimed author, Niall Ferguson, one of the world's leading historians of the global economy. His latest book, Civilization: The West and the Rest, is already an international bestseller. Controversial, expansive, and eloquent, Mr. Ferguson has been called "the most talented British historian of his generation." Other notable speakers on the program are Terri Morrison, author of Kiss, Bow or Shake Hands, presenting on Thursday; Paul Sullivan, author of Clutch; and Shankar Vedantam, author of The Hidden Brain, will present on Saturday. All of these exciting and extraordinary presentations are not to be missed.

Earn up to 12.25 hours of CLE credit by attending our outstanding educational programming. Our substantive law and practice area committees have also planned cutting edge programs. New this year these sessions are broken into four time slots allowing attendees to participate in more than two committee CLE sessions. Join over 1,100 attorneys and clients for evening entertainment, beginning on Wednesday with a reception for new and prospective members in the Exhibit Showcase, followed by the Welcome Reception—New Orleans Style! Thursday spend the evening at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome participating in healthy competitions, while being amazed by your surroundings and enjoying good food, drink, and music. Friday evening brings the Diversity Networking Reception and is open to all. This is a perfect place to meet friends prior to enjoying an evening on the town. The President's Gala on Saturday night, with gourmet food and exquisite wine, will again feature the DRI Silent Auction. Don't miss the excitement of out-bidding your friends and colleagues for many exciting prizes. Monies raised from the auction will benefit the National Foundation for Judicial Excellence (NFJE). Special issues exist with in-house legal departments that can expose usually privileged communications to discovery. When Is a Disability Not a Disability?

An alleged disability can be adjudicated in several ways. There can be significant differences, though, between a finding of disability in the pain-and-suffering arena (including no-fault threshold cases), and under private disability policies. This session will examine the differences among workers' compensation, social security, and statutory disabilities, and address how a finding of disability in one context may not establish disability in another.

TOXIC TORTS AND ENVIRONMENTAL LAW Is Litigation Killing Us? Or Are We Killing Litigation?

This session will include an analysis of the impact of tort reform laws over the past 10 years, including the identification of the major changes and arguments for and against additional changes. We will look at statistics and trends regarding trials and the effect of recent laws on the prevalence of trials (specifically with regard to complex litigation such as toxic tort and environmental claims). We will discuss potential impacts of these trends on the capability of our profession to continue providing qualified, competent litigators to handle future claims. We will close with a discussion of whether the jury trial continues to be—or even should be—the ultimate crucible of truth in litigation.

At the Intersection of International and Domestic Law—The Supreme Court to Address Corporate Liability for Violations of International Law

This session will explore the emerging issue of corporate liability for violations of customary international law. In Kiobel v. Royal Dutch Petroleum, residents of Nigeria brought suit in U.S. district court against foreign oil companies for alleged human rights abuses in connection with oil exploration activities in Africa. The issue before the Supreme Court is whether the Alien Tort Statute, 28 U.S.C. § 1350, affords jurisdiction over the plaintiffs' claims.

This presentation will explain the role of domestic and international law in the analysis and show how the outcome of the case may have important ramifications on corporate liability for foreign operations.

Subsequent Purchaser Doctrine—An Evolving Affirmative Defense in Toxic Torts or an Outlier?

Contamination of property often is not discovered until years later, and sometimes the property will have been sold to a new owner in the meantime. Many states recognize the “subsequent purchaser doctrine,” which provides that a claim for damage to property accrues at the time the damage occurs, and the claim belongs to the person who owns the property at that time. This session will give an overview of this important, but often unknown doctrine.

The Significance of Statistical Significance

Epidemiology studies are central to proof of general causation in most toxic torts cases. If the results of any study are not statistically significant, however, they have limited value and in many jurisdictions may be excluded. Presented by the Diversity Committee and DRI International

Being skilled in intercultural communications is vital in the global marketplace. Attorneys must be prepared to negotiate through different business practices, cognitive styles, and protocol. Understanding whether a culture generally accepts facts as evidence, or opts for a combination of feelings, faith, and facts, can be a critical edge in a deposition, jury selection, or settlement negotiations. Those who understand cultural differences will gain a strategic advantage defending clients and developing business opportunities. In this session you will learn how culture shapes beliefs, practices, and values so you can avoid common misunderstandings and faux pas. You will gain practical tips for navigating cultural differences, skills to deal with foreign clients, work with foreign witnesses, and to persuade culturally diverse jury pools.

Acceptable Activity? Or Alert Your Malpractice Carrier? Navigating the Tripartite Relationship in the Twenty-First Century

Presented by the Insurance Law and Professional Liability Committees

Session qualifies for one hour of ethics credit.

Could you be sued for failing to obtain alternative coverage for a claim? Do you risk an ethics investigation as a result of conflict issues? Do you know the risks that you face, whether as outside counsel, the insured, or an insurance carrier? In today's world the intersection of insurance law and professional responsibility creates new challenges as defense lawyers representing policyholders routinely are faced with conflicts of interests between the insured and the insurance carrier. Conflict issues need to be identified by insurance claim professionals and counsel to guard against extra-contractual and malpractice claims.

To help defense counsel and insurance professionals identify and resolve these conflicts, a panel of leading authorities will explore real-life scenarios in which the audience will have the opportunity to weigh-in through “real-time” electronic voting. For those who represent clients or work in this industry, this is a must-attend session.

Are Mortgages Really the Same as Toasters? Is a Credit Card Akin to an Anti-Depressant? A Deep Dive into Defending Industries Subject to Federal Regulations

Presented by the Commercial Litigation, Drug and Medical Device, and Product Liability Committees

Prior to the passage of the Dodd-Frank Act, two law professors proposed that the safety paradigm applicable to consumer products such as toasters be applied to financial products such as home mortgages. That philosophy guided formation of the newest federal regulatory agency, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB). Not surprisingly, the CFPB has suggested adopting a number of measures used by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, including an online consumer complaint database, as well as heavy reliance on the states' attorneys general, who regularly supplement their enforcement budgets by outsourcing contingency fee contracts to private plaintiffs' firms. In early 2012 a pair of law professors argued that new financial products should be screened for social utility, along the lines of Food and Drug Administration scrutiny over pharmaceutical innovations, and regulated accordingly.

As newly aggressive federal agencies borrow regulatory models from each other, learn how to prepare for the next wave of regulatory enforcement and consumer claims. This session will provide critical insight and cutting edge defense strategies for responding to federal regulators, defending multi-district and class action litigation, and marshalling resources to defend against plaintiffs' lawyers representing individual clients or the government.

When the Players Are All In—Successfully Resolving High Stakes Litigation in the Twenty-First Century

Presented by the Alternative Dispute Resolution, Employment and Labor Law, Medical Liability and Health Care Law and Toxic Torts and Environmental Law Committees

Whether you are inside counsel, the insurer, or outside counsel, this is an interactive session you cannot afford to miss. Our panel of experts will incorporate audience participation through “real-time” voting as they navigate the multi-faceted valuation process in a complex fact scenario facing a hypothetical Fortune 100 company.

This session will demonstrate how widely the value of cases can differ among the stakeholders involved in cases where the claims range from product and premises liability to toxic torts, employment disputes, and beyond. You will learn how to evaluate the different factors that cause the range of reasonableness to fluctuate and change, as well as strategies to best evaluate, negotiate and resolve high stakes claims. The session will also teach you how to consider the extent to which Medicare Secondary Payer obligations and related federal reporting requirements can impact settlement dynamics for all kinds of claims.

GOVERNMENT ENFORCEMENT AND CORPORATE COMPLIANCE

SOX to Dodd-Frank—10 Years of Increased Government Enforcement and Current Trends

Highly publicized fraud involving Enron, Tyco, WorldCom, and others begat the Sarbanes-Oxley Act (SOX). The economic crisis of 2008 spawned even more legislative and regulatory initiatives, notably the Dodd-Frank Act of 2010. Sweeping changes over the past decade have caused corporations to change the way they view corporate governance and its relationship to government regulation and enforcement.

Our experienced panel will discuss the practical impact of the changing landscape of governmental enforcement, providing both a historical perspective and analyses of current trends in the “policing” of corporate governance by both government regulators and the U.S. Department of Justice. This will include discussion of current application of DOJ’s Principles for Prosecutions of Business Organizations, recent regulatory actions against and prosecutions of corporate officers, and the impact of enhanced whistleblower provisions under both the False Claims Act and Dodd-Frank.

The Fall of the House of Zeus

Session qualifies for one hour of ethics credit.

The career and downfall of the powerful plaintiffs' lawyer, Dickie Scruggs, shocked the legal circles of Mississippi, where accusations of "jackpot justice"—resulting in huge judgments in civil trials—were countered by complaints that the campaigns of elected judges, including justices on the state's Supreme Court, were won by heavy infusions of money from business interests. The Scruggs case also played out against the backdrop of bitter quarrels among leading trial lawyers involving the distribution of funds won in tobacco, asbestos, and post-Katrina settlements. And by the time Scruggs, whose stake in the tobacco initiative came to $1.6 billion, pleaded guilty to corruption charges, questions arose not only over his behavior, but over the tactics used by the federal prosecutors to ensnare the defendants. The author of the acclaimed book about Dickie Scruggs and the events that led to his fall will give life to events as a storyteller during this session.

LAWYERS PROFESSIONALISM AND ETHICS

The Five Ws (and an H) of Reporting Unethical Conduct—Who, What, When, Where, Why and How?

Session qualifies for one hour of ethics credit.

Model Rule 8.3 requires that lawyers who know that another member of the bar has engaged in unethical conduct must report that member to the appropriate disciplinary authority. The failure to make a mandatory report can subject the non-reporting lawyer to discipline. Unfortunately, the rule has led to confusion among lawyers regarding when they need to report and the appropriate time to report. Our experienced panel will discuss the standards and timing for mandatory reporting and also other issues lawyers must consider before reporting on the conduct of other lawyers.

Twenty-First Century Pattern Products Litigation—Litigation at the Speed of the Internet

Internet-generated claims, consolidated and coordinated multiform assaults, regulatory agency lobbying, congressional hearings, 24-hour media coverage, securities, and criminal claims—are these really the new face of product liability pattern litigation? Hear directly from the front lines in this discussion of the changing face of high profile product liability litigation. The session will discuss the plaintiffs' bar's new approaches to large scale pattern product defect litigation; why they are trying to turn individual personal injury and economic loss claims into "mass torts"; and how companies can prevent, detect, defend, and resolve these multi-front, high profile attacks on their reputations and their products.

ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Arbitration Clauses That Work

Clients want arbitration clauses that will be enforced and result in an expedient and cost efficient resolution to disputes, while keeping the dispute in a confidential setting. Errors in drafting can result in arbitration clauses that are not enforced or proceedings that are inefficient and costly. This session will focus on how to draft an arbitration clause that will stand up to challenges, avoid mistakes and ambiguities, and streamline the arbitration process.

Is the Supreme Court Marching Arbitration to Waterloo?

This session will address how the U.S. Supreme Court in CompuCredit Corp. v. Greenwood and KPMG LLP v. Cocchi has continued its trend in favor of arbitration in holding that arbitration must be compelled even if it leads to piecemeal litigation and even in the face of a statute that mandates notice to consumers that they have “a right to sue.” The session will focus on the recent opinions, trends, and whether the Court has gone so far that it is inviting Congress to step in and act.

New Lessons from an Old Doctrine—An Update on the Learned Intermediary Doctrine

Depending on the source, one could conclude that the learned intermediary doctrine is either a viable, winning argument for pharmaceutical defendants, or an outmoded vestige of a time gone by. Although some jurisdictions have whittled away at the doctrine through exceptions and the West Virginia Supreme Court rejected it altogether—later prompting the state legislature to intervene—the doctrine presents a worthwhile defense argument in most jurisdictions.

State Attorney General Actions Against Drug and Medical Device Manufacturers—Current Issues

Over the last few years, the attorneys general of many states have been active in pursuing litigation against drug and medical device manufacturers, raising a variety of claims based upon different theories. These cases present a number of issues, including the retention of private attorneys to prosecute the case, attorneys general acting in parens patriae capacity, the active participation by the attorneys general in MDLs, and the aggregation of claims by attorneys general through the procedural device of joining multiple defendants as opposed to through class actions.

TRIAL TACTICS

Beyond Tweeting and Status Updates—Social Media as a Powerful Impeachment Tool

For defense litigators, impeaching a plaintiff's credibility on liability and damages issues is one of the most difficult aspects of most cases. With the recent boom in social networking and media, defense litigators have the ability to access reams of valuable evidence with a simple click of a mouse and few taps of a keyboard. However, in order to appreciate the advantages social media offers, and all the potential useful evidence lurking on the Internet, one must first know where to look and how. While most attorneys are familiar with various social networking options, many lack proficiency when it comes to their use, which prohibits those lawyers from finding the "silver bullets" that can break a witness. This session will focus on how to navigate social media and obtain information about your witnesses. It will describe the information you need to start your investigation, as well as an overview of Facebook and Twitter.

The critical question of "How much deference does the settlement community owe CMS on the LMSA issue?" based on currently enacted law will be analyzed. Dancing on Glass—yourself forever dancing on shattered glass?

Pamela Binnings Ewen exchanged partnership in the law firm of Baker Botts LLP for a writing career a few years ago. She's the author of Dancing on Glass and Chasing the Wind (a sequel, due August 1st), among other works, both novels about a young woman lawyer struggling with the challenge of creating balance in her life. Set in Ms. Ewen's hometown, New Orleans, in the mid-1970s, these fast-paced stories in the glittering city will keep you up at night.

The discussion will be lead by Joseph J. DeSalvo, Jr., owner and operator of Faulkner House Books and his wife, Rosemary James, a noted author herself and former television journalist covering Louisiana politics for WWL-TV, the CBS affiliate in New Orleans. Ms. Ewen will join Mr. DeSalvo and Ms. James to answer questions and talk about her books. Faulkner House Books is located at 624 Pirate's Alley in the heart of New Orleans' beautiful and historic French Quarter. Faulkner House Books is a sanctuary for fine literature and rare editions and has been described by both collectors and writers as America's most charming book store.

Networking Reception at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome

Sponsored by LawyerGuard

DRI will hold this year's Networking Reception at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome, home to the XLIV Super Bowl champions, the New Orleans Saints. The Superdome sits on 52 acres of land, is 27 stories, over 269,000 square feet, and has a seating capacity of 76,468. It is the world's largest fixed domed structure. Its steel frame covers a 13 acre expanse; the dome is 273 feet and it has a diameter of 680 feet. We hope that you enjoy your visit to this truly amazing stadium!

Note: Dress casually, wear your favorite sports team jersey and don't forget to wear comfortable, flat shoes (no heels) because we will be on the field. Buses will begin departing the New Orleans Marriott at 5:45 PM for transfer to the Superdome and will run continuously throughout the evening.
