AmLaw Litigation Daily featured WTO Partner Clarissa Collier in a story about how the Great Recession affected career paths.

The article, titled "The Winding Path Some Litigators Take to Partnership," said when Clarissa started practicing law, she planned to be a commercial litigator. Due to the state of the 2008 economy, she instead found work in areas including bankruptcy and investigations. At WTO, she represents clients in catastrophic injury cases.

"As my father would say, I 'followed the cheese' to build my hours and be successful,'" she said.
