

“Protecting the Defendant: Challenging ‘Other Acts’ Evidence in Product Liability Cases,” LJO’s Prod. Liab. L. & Strategy, at 1, (June 2000).

Articles

Jun 1, 2000

Co-authored with Christopher J. Meyer

Plaintiffs sometimes argue that “other acts” evidence is being offered only to prove motive, preparation, plan, intent or opportunity - all appropriate uses under Rule 404(b). This article discusses a number of arguments, using Rule 405, 404, and 403, that a defendant in a product liability lawsuit should consider in response to this situation.

Related Professionals

Habib Nasrullah
Partner

Related Practices

Product Liability

