We approach pro bono cases with the same relentless commitment to excellence that we bring to our paying client work, and Law360 recognized this by ranking us #6 among firms of our size in this year's Pro Bono Leaders rankings.

The results are based on attorney participation in pro bono work. Last year, we had more total pro bono hours than ever before (7,837)–and 97% of our associates participated in at least one pro bono matter. We also logged an average of 55 pro bono hours per lawyer–well above the national average. Our success is driven by our firm's principles of opportunity, participation, and commitment to excellence, which fueled broad engagement and support across the firm.
